The Daily Commercial

PITTSBURGH, JULY 16, 1868.

THE COMMERCIAL is the oldest daily paper in the State, and therefore has a good commercial reading from any other paper in Pittsburgh. For the only Pittsburgh paper that can be accurately literally, given by mail or express, and all the news of the day.

As proof of the assertion placed on the outside reports of the COMMERCIAL, we call out the fact that we regularly receive by the New York Associated, Morning Star, New York, and other papers of the character in that and other cities, and the leading English commercial papers and circulars regularly receive them each week. There is either the Southern cities, hardly an item finishing, or trading manufactory of any kind that is not noticed in the COMMERCIAL, generally, because its reports are the only full and reliable guide of the Pittsburgh markets.

DISTRICT ATTORNEY—ALFRED L. PEARSON.

SHERIFF—JAMES R. BLACK.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER—HENRY LAUGHEAD.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER—JONATHAN MILLER.

CLERK OF THE COURTS—R. L. MCCLAY.

DIRECTOR OF POOR—J. G. MURRAY.

The only county in the Nineteenth District, in which there was any opposition to the renomination of Hon. GRANGER W. STONE was Erie, and the Republicans there on Saturday last declared in his favor by three hundred majority over two popular citizens of Erie.

BEYOND wide-spread dissatisfaction among leaders who have great influence over the rank and file of the Democratic party, there does not seem to be much ground for the third ticket rumors. The dissatisfied leaders can accomplish in another way the end which the third ticket would have in view,—by voting directly for GRANT. As the contest and extent, this method of settling Mr. SEYMOUR's case, will be adopted by thousands of Democrats.

WHO AVOIDED JOHNSON should now, like Buchanan, announce as a candidate, if there is a candidate to avoid. Of course, in the SEYMOUR despise from the party, personally and political, and foresee known it. When JOHNSON was running for the Vice-Presidency, SEYMOUR opened his heart and said kind things of him. It is among the least of Mr. SEYMOUR's sins that he did. The two had long been Democrats together. They knew each other. Whatever else is true of JOHNSON, there is no reason to suppose that he will go out of his way to help SEYMOUR. He is not the man to help the candidate who despises him.

WHEN Mr. JOHNSON, through accession, came to power and had the opportunity of showing of what stuff he was made, he verified the saying that no man should be elected to the office of Vice President not competent to discharge the higher duties. The mistake of the past must teach for the future.

FRANCIS BLAIR has shown his teeth and claws too soon. The terrorism in his revolutionary letter are badly timed. WADE HAMPTON may bluster and brag that whoever is elected by a majority of white votes shall rule the South, and BLAIR threaten to undo the reconstruction acts of the past three years. Forewarned is forearmed, and the country must not be endangered by BLAIR's terrors or threats of revolution.

THE CITY PRIMARY ELECTIONS.

It has been suggested by members of the party, whose experience in politics entitles their opinion to respectful consideration, that the time fixed by the City Executive Committee (August 15th) for holding the primary elections for candidates for municipal officers, is entirely too soon, and that the election should take place at least one month later—say the 15th of September. There are now twenty-four weeks to be canvassed, only one month's time to do the work, and that month the busiest in the year. It will be impossible for the candidates to go over the territory in that time, and, moreover, large numbers of our citizens will be absent from the city until after the middle of August.

There is no necessity for making the time so long between the nomination and the election. Four weeks would be much better than eight. These suggestions are thrown out for the consideration of the Committee, who have the power to re-consider their action, and to a later day for the primary elections. If a change is considered wise, it should be made at as early a day as practicable. We believe that the interests of the party would be better subserved by having a later day, giving more time for canvassing among the people, and shortening the final struggle short and big arms.

THE DENVER RESORT

If we want peace, we must be Prepared; if we want war, we must be Ready. If we are the one that must be first to strike, we must be strikers. There is no compromise; no choice between war and peace. That is left. The ballot boxes will decide the contest. Were it not that we believe in the result, we might predict results that would appal the boldest.

There must be victory for Grant and the Republican party. It is impossible to contemplate a reign of terror under the Democracy without a resort to violent measures to retain that liberty purchased through the war. In Ohio, where the Democrats obtained a majority last fall, they proceeded to place here and restrictions on colored people, incompatible with professions made when colored officers were wanted in the war. In the State they also passed an embarrassing law affecting creditors, and with their majority plainly showed the animus by which they were governed.

We have now in the coming campaign to do combat between the minions of another principle. It cannot be supposed that loyal men would consent to the legislation of the past few years undone and the security and peace secured over to the men of the rebellion.

The results of the late elections, in the line of our forebears, may seem to them to be the darkest hour ever known to the Commonwealth. At least a majority of office holders in the State were elected, and the Democratic party were in the ascendant, and have been applied to continue the complete family in possession, and to have been a source of liberty was consid-

WHAT IT MEANS.

"The golden gates of hell" are attractive to the world. For some time the progress of Russia in Asia has been watched with jealous care. That country possesses the key to open the "golden gates" when policy makes it prudent to do so. Steadily she advances, making conquests in the east, and soon will reach the far famed territory of Afghanistan. To us, with such extensive territory the advances may make little difference, unless in the more equal division of the globe amongst great powers. To England the advance is more serious. Every million of Russia in Asia tends to show that if ever the Western Powers of Europe took a quarrel with her, the battle ground will not be confined, to in the last war, to the Crimea.

We are led to these remarks by the meagre cablegram in yesterday morning's dispatches announcing that FREDERICK SCHUR has announced himself the ally of Russia. This in itself shows how the wind blows, and coupled with the recent successes of Russia in Bokhara, will put the English ministry on the alert to watch with jealous care the advances of her rival for Asiatic sway.

Russia does not pursue conquests in order to form a desire to add to her territory. She is driven to it by irresistible fate. She is the heiress that are pointed into the hospitalities of England from Indian possessions, and so Russia does from an increasing population, one for cultivation of those articles necessary to a high state of civilization, looks to for future possessions.

India and China are destined to play an important part in the future history of the world. If we no longer "ride at the top of the Storm," which, it is passed in many conventional and political sense, we discovered, became the "Cape of Good Hope." It is no longer a weary passage of many months to reach the limits of old continents, where populations are vast, their systems of philosophy speculations for new world thinkers, and where material resources are abundant.

England looks of her "Overland route to India," and by her enterprise has made the journey across the continent of Europe a pleasure, the passage of the Red Sea merely a trip, or find a journey to India from London in the year of our Lord most of much more moment than the passage of the Atlantic from the New to the Old World.

While England has done what she can to wrest her Indian possessions with every reach, France has been busy in the Suez canal, connecting oceans and shortening sea distances. The journey of Russia in Asia can but be compared to a vast inland Atlantic sweep, preparatory to some definite railway scheme. Russia fighting diplomatically now for power, recognizes the importance of the present aspect of affairs, and seeks to direct the attention of Europe on powers to what we are doing.

The greatest work of the age, so far as effective results, is the Atlantic and Pacific Railway. We can, with that completed, look calmly on the menaces of Russia on India by the route she travels, on the work of France in the Suez canal, on the labor of England in promoting easy access to her distant possessions. India, China, Australia, will be within such short time from America that we can see to the relations when the road is completed. "This is the way, travel ye in."

It is that wonderful work which alarms Europe, only nations see the advantages we possess, save our geographical position, and civilization will certainly rise to our side. The wealth of the world will be at our feet. In less than half a century, cities will be in existence in the far West surpassing most sanguine expectations, and the gap between national debt and great prosperity in finances closed.

In view of considerations of this kind, with a future grand and commanding, how wicked it would be to listen to the voices of the harbingers who plead repudiation of our national obligations. To listen and yield would be suicidal to our advancement. We are striving to bear the pain amongst nations; striving to teach the world how superior Republican institutions are to rule by King, Kaiser, Czar or Emperor, and must not be led into the by path of error by swindling politicians who have failed to comprehend the mighty destiny of the nation.

TEST OF FAITH.

As a general rule let us never nothing except the faith of the makers. It is seldom a wanting cause is backed up with offers to wager large sums on its success. When observing men offer to bet and their offers are not snapped up, the public readily gets an impression which way the cat is going to jump. Mr. CHARLES WILLIAMS in the Speech of the Times of the last issue puts out the following:

> A REMARK TO WHICH SOME WORDS CAN BE ADDED.
> "I will bet you," said a Democrat to a Republican, "that Seymour will carry the State of New York by a majority of one hundred thousand." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by one hundred thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by fifty thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by fifty thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by twenty-five thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by twenty-five thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by twelve thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by twelve thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by six thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by six thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by three thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by three thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by one thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by one thousand votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by one hundred votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by one hundred votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by ten votes." "I will bet you," said the Republican, "that he will not carry it by ten votes." "I will bet you," said the Democrat, "that he will carry it by one vote."
